Breaking News

Tommy Robinson is planning a large-scale demonstration in London on 13 September 2025, which he has dubbed a "free speech festival" and "Unite the Kingdom" event.

The event is being organised in the wake of his recent release from prison, and the establishment is still doing whatever it can to stop him.

As is becoming the norm in the UK, instead of pursuing the perpetrators, the establishment is pursuing those who speak about the perpetrators and their crimes.

Tommy Robinson, who is fast becoming a hero of the people and a symbol of defiance against government overreach and injustices, has announced plans for a national protest in London on 13 September. He is calling it a "free speech festival" and a "Uniting the Kingdom" festival.

"Our biggest weapon is free speech. On 13 September, we will celebrate it like never before," he said.

The event is scheduled to begin at 9 am at London Waterloo station, with a march past Parliament to Trafalgar Square.

In response to Robinson's plans, multiple "anti-racist" groups, including Stand Up To Racism ("SUTR"), are organising a national mobilisation against the "far-right" and are hiring a coach to bus "protestors" to London for its "protest against Tommy Robinson."

As we have previously noted, SUTR is a fringe communist organisation which stokes racism and xenophobia in the UK to overthrow parliamentary democracy. In a 2018 article, Politicalite exposed that local councils were funding this nefarious organisation.

But SUTR are not the only government-affiliated organisation that is organising counter-protests, and no doubt itching to cause trouble on the day. In an almost comical way, if it wasn't so pathetically childish, the Public and Commercial Services Union ("PCS") is calling its counter-demonstration a "march against Tommy Robinson."

The PCS is the UK's largest trade union representing civil servants and one of the largest trade unions in the country. It is affiliated with several international and national organisations, including the Trades Union Congress, the Irish Congress of Trade Unions, the Scottish Trades Union Congress, the National Society of Staff Nurses, Public Services International and the European Federation of Public Service Unions.

PCS is known for its advocacy on social and political issues, with affiliations to organisations such as Abortion Rights, Amnesty International and the Cuba Solidarity Campaign, a British organisation that campaigns against the US' activities related to Cuba.

We would do well to remember all of this about PCS the next time civil servants go on strike while on taxpayers' time.

If, unlike government-affiliated counter-protestors, you want to join Robinson's call to stand up for free speech and stand up for Britons' rights and freedoms, you can keep abreast of developments by following Robinson on Twitter (Now X) HERE. As he says, "Be part of history!"

Persecution of the Fictional "Far-Right" Continues

While handing out flyers at a train station to advertise his free speech rally, Robinson was attacked. He fought back and now the police are making arrest enquiries.

On 28 July 2025, a video surfaced showing Robinson allegedly knocking a man unconscious at St Pancras station during a confrontation while he was promoting his 13 September event. The man was taken to a hospital with serious but non-life-threatening injuries.

Robinson claimed the man attacked him, stating, "He come at me, you saw that."

The British Transport Police confirmed they were called to the station after 8 pm and were making arrest enquiries. On 29 July, it was reported that there was talk that Robinson had boarded a flight out of the country.

Why is the establishment hounding Robinson? Brian Rose, host of London Real, sums it up in the video below: "[Robinson] is a man who looks like he's been fighting against major institutions that have been trying to silence these stories of the rape gangs, which now, with inquiries going into them, seems there's much more truth than we thought."

During a recent interview, Robinson told Rose that "the media and the government institutions and the police, they do not want this story [about the rape gangs] out because they were all complicit in suppressing these stories."

Rose mentioned Robinson's documentaries exposing the Muslim rape gangs which you can find on Urban Scoop's website HERE.

What Robison said about the media is proven by the propaganda embedded in reports of the incident at the train station on 28 July, even by "lean right" corporate media. For example, the Daily Mail referred to Robinson as a "hard right activist." The Mirror took the smearing a step further, referring to Robinson as a "far-right activist."

Almost as if declaring a victory, on 30 July, the Express headlined 'Assault suspect Tommy Robinson could miss his own free speech festival', again referring to Robinson as a "far-right activist." Unfortunately for the establishment, as people see with their own eyes what is happening in the UK, Robinson becomes ever more popular; making a martyr of him is drawing people to support him rather than scaring them away.

The use of the terms "hard right" and "far right" to describe Robinson or those who attend his rallies is completely spurious. The left-right spectrum refers to economics. Communism and socialism – on the political hard, far or radical-left – are sociopolitical, philosophical and economic ideologies. But the political right is not; it is simply economics. The only outlet that appears to want to combat the weaponisation of language about political terms is the Political Compass.

To keep people grounded on what the terms really mean, Political Compass illustrates using two axes. The x-axis is the left-right axis, relating to economics. The political right advocates for less government intervention and private ownership. The political left advocates for more government intervention and more government ownership. The y-axis relates to social attitudes, such as authoritarian or libertarian. Visualising it this way, it easily demonstrates that authoritarians and libertarians can be found on both the political left and the political right.

Although the political left has attempted to politicise them, the terms "conservative," "liberal" ("free" or "freedom"), "nationalism" and "progressive" are used to describe a person's morals or values. Conservatives and nationalists can equally be found on the political left and the political right. And there are liberals on both the political left and the political right, although the further left one goes, individual freedoms will inevitably be lost; more government ownership and control always leads to a loss of individual rights and freedoms.

Nowhere have politicians, corporate media or left-wing activists justified their use of "right," let alone "far-right," when they refer to Robinson and his supporters. Robinson does not campaign for more privatisation. He campaigns for freedoms, and the safety, security and justice for Britain's white working-class children. These are moral and social issues, not "far-right" issues. Issues that the whole of society should be concerned about.

Muslim Rape Gangs, Cover-Ups and Collapsed Communities

In his video above, Rose mentioned a recent interview with Robinson. Rose has posted clips from this interview on his Twitter profile, such as the one below.

While previously it was a hobby culminating in writing articles for Wikipedia (until things made a drastic and undeniable turn in 2020) and a few books for private consumption, since March 2020 I have become a full-time researcher and writer in reaction to the global takeover that came into full view with the introduction of covid-19. For most of my life, I have tried to raise awareness that a small group of people planned to take over the world for their own benefit. There was no way I was going to sit back quietly and simply let them do it once they made their final move.
